

ONE MORE DOSE — PROPOSAL

Team Name: NARRC

Members: Rayyan Younus, Abbas Rangoonwalla, Neev Kataria, Chaitanya Bhargava, Raja Singh Khurana

Email:

rayyan27@gmail.com,
chaitanya.bhargava@students.iiit.ac.in,
neev.jayprakash.kataria@gmail.com,
rajakhurana18@gmail.com,
abbas.rangoonwalla@students.iiit.ac.in,

IndieConnect:

<https://www.indieconnect.in/dev/raskinband>
<https://www.indieconnect.in/dev/neev4321>
<https://www.indieconnect.in/dev/rayyan27>
<https://www.indieconnect.in/dev/abbasrangoonwalla>
<https://www.indieconnect.in/dev/chaitanyabhargava>

THE IDEA

Comic: The entire game takes place inside the panels of a comic book. Each panel acts as a small dungeon that the player enters, explores, and clears. Once the panel is completed, the comic advances to the next panel, making the player's progress feel like turning the page and moving through a visual story.

Light: The protagonist is a drug addict trapped in a distorted version of his own world. At the beginning, everything is almost completely monochrome. As the player survives each panel and progresses through the protagonist's journey, more colour gradually returns to the world. Colour therefore becomes both a visual reward and a representation of our addict slowly finding clarity.

Twist (Dizziness): When the protagonist gets high, the comic itself begins to feel wrong. Panels can flip upside down and reverse from left to right, while movement and the player's sense of direction become disorienting. The player must adapt to the altered panel and find their way back to clarity.

CORE GAMEPLAY LOOP

Enter panel → explore → fight/avoid enemies → discover a small story moment → clear the panel → move to the next panel → regain colour → continue

Combat is quite simple: a basic attack, movement, and some special abilities. The challenge comes primarily from the environment and the dizziness mechanic rather than from a large number of weapons, enemies, or complex systems.